Amazing Adventures Around the World is another fun, find-the-object game from PopCap. The game features attractive graphics but an unfortunately low viewing resolution of only 800x600 stretched to fullscreen. The gameplay is brisk, the music appropriate and there are both a collectible and bonus game added on to each one of the campaigns 25 missions. Unfortunately both widescreen resolutions and the Steam Overlay are not supported. Overall however, Amazing Adventures Around the World delivers what it promises, an entertaining albeit flawed puzzle game.. A very nice hidden object game. A bit boring to solve the same puzzles as the locations tend to be repeated, but still ok with the items texture and the wonderful "find every object on the picture mode". Dear Gods, why did I buy the Popcap Bundle? WHY?

Let's do this.

This game is the 6th hidden object game I have played. Like the Mystery P.I. games that I have played and reviewed, this game was produced by Spintop and published via Popcap. The objects hidden in the scenes are almost all the same, and there are only a very few which would be different.

The flavor of story accompanying this game is finding a stone tablet, which will lead to the World Gem (which looks like a ginormous refined diamond big enough to be likened to the size of a toddler). Well. That's all of a story.

I have played through the main game and the endless seeking mode for hidden objects, like I did in Escape Rosecliff Island and the four Mystery P.I. games I have played. Good Gods did that take some time.

Not recommended unless you're a junkie for hidden object games and have the necessary patience and tenacity to find everything.

...and there will be another Amazing Adventures game waiting for me. But this will be reviewed in due time.. I keep nodding off while playing this game.. when you have that "there's too much going on for me to concentrate" feeling, this one is a fine time waster. was definitely worth a play through.

Similar to the other game in this series (Amazing Adventures - The Lost Tomb) this is a simple point and click hidden objects game. This one, again, sees you looking for a hidden artifact. Each screen has many items to find which then leads onto you solving a puzzle to get to the next round. The objects are very clear and very well drawn and this adventure takes you to many famous landmarks around the world. If you find the two special hidden objects on every screen then you are invited to play a mode where you can find every object on every screen. A very well implemented hidden object game that'll keep you amused for hours.. Finally ground this game to 100% completion, just so I could say I did. Tried to take a printscreen for posterity, but F12 doesn't seem to want to work in-game... Other reviewers have it right. It's a nice little time waster, but lots of repetition makes it a little, well, repetitive.

Recommended, but there are others you might want to look at first.. It repeats levels [with new objects to find, to be fair] before it's run out of levels, some of the clues are rather obtuse, and it feels unnecessarily long. But, for what it is - a hidden object game - it's alright.

Wouldn't recommend getting it at full price, but I honestly don't think I'd recommend that of any game on Steam given how often stuff goes on sale.. Someone said it best, "It made me keep nodding off!"

I wholeheartedly concur, couldn't play this more than a few minutes and I was off in LALA land with the faeries. Rest assured if you suffer with insomnia this little beauty will put you in a deep sleep within half hour tops. I aren't kidding. I really tested this. I tried everything to combat its narcolepsy effects from toothpicks under my eyelids, to black coffee straight. Nothing and I mean nothing stopped it from making me suddenly becoming lethargic and slamming my head with a dull thud on my desk as I snored away peacefully.

There should be health warnings with this game...

"Play it surrounded with pillows"

"Make sure your computer desk doesn't have sharp edges"

"Ensure a close relative intrudes into your room and shakes you violently by the shoulders every half hour just to make sure your still breathing"

I don't know what causes it to have such a lullaby effect. Is it the constant music that just has a metronome dull beat to it? Is it the hand drawn art which makes you squint harder than a Chinese man looking directly into an eclipse? Is it the constant vague gnawing of Hidden Object Scenes which go on forever? (For instance it will ask you to find something that 'pumps blood' so you must look for a 'heart' which could be in word or picture format).

Apparently I've played nearly 8 hrs on this game (7.6 which would have been me sleeping). What I can tell you is that the game was originally developed by spin top games who were later completely acquired by Popcap. It requires you to grind away at a handful of object scenes constantly until you reach level 25. With each level you raise up you get an artefact (a jigsaw piece), you also get a small entry in a journal, which offers only lame info about certain places around the world.

After every HOS you are required to solve a puzzle, from spot the difference, word find or just doing a jigsaw. Once you have completed that, you are tortured with another HOS probably the same one you have done like 50 times already. After you reach level 25 you have to do a final jigsaw, do a very easy memory game, and then finally rotate a few disks so that they align perfectly with an outside pattern. Then 'Poof' you get to see a picture of a diamond and for those that have OCD the satisfaction that you never have to play this again.

The game also asks you to find two gems per level until you get to 50, but this really is a no brainer as you have literally hundreds and hundreds of opportunity to find them. The 50 gems unlock two modes, one which is unlimited HOS and the 2nd which is unlimited spot the difference. These are no doubt put there for people who want to induce themselves into a coma. While it might sound like I'm pulling your leg, I assure you I'm not. I have no doubt that the military are also interested in this game for weapon usage. Display this game across a projector and soldiers running across a battle field would just fall in a heap. HOS warfare is just around the corner.

Be prepared to be utterly dazed and confused after you awake from your slumber too. You might find yourself out for days, weeks, months even. I awoke to discover trump had become president. I was so shocked, dazed just like a deer in the headlights. My only reassurance is that I could play this game whenever I wanted and it would no doubt put me down again in no time...

<http://store.steampowered.com/curator/6843548/>. good skills. I really enjoyed the game to start with. There were many maps and mini games between them, but a few levels in it started to get repetitious, especially the mini games. The mini games repeat themselves with the exact same game with the exact same picture. This was a great game to play after a long day. I could sit, play, and not really think. Timed mode gives plenty of time if your goal is just to relax. I will look for more games by popcap for this reason. It was a relaxing little game.. I enjoy HO games, but this , personally, lost it's fun value about 10 "missions" in. Then it was just a lot of redundancy. I don't mind redundancy, if it's challenging. This game really isn't a challenge at all for me. About half of the time spent "playing" this game was me minimizing it to do other things because I grew bored of it at the moment, then coming back to it later.

Pros:

- Great way to spend some free time, especially if you enjoy HO puzzle games
- Simple to play
- Music is not that bad. \(I personally mute it to listen to my music, but the game soundtrack isn't bad.\)
- Use of hints for finding those tricky \(and poorly\) named objects.

Cons:

- Game loosed it challenge about a third of the way into it.
- Puzzles become VERY redundant.
- Many of the items you had to find in the later HO challenges were rather vague at what the object could be. It would say one thing and mean something completely different. \(Example is it would want you to find a tool. A hand saw is a tool, but it's not the tool it wants you to find.\)
- Graphics could be better, but for the age of this game, I'm not going to complain too much.

Everyone has their own opinion, but I personally lost my appeal for this game. It was a nice time waster, that was about it.. As far as puzzle games go this is OK. It is pretty fun in the beginnng but with time it can get boring as they use the same map multiple times. I guess if you want to play and relax it is not bad.
